Approaching Old Problems in New Ways

Featured Guest Speaker: Ronda Taylor Bullock, PhD

January 15, 2019, 12:00-2:00 PM

UNC School of Social Work, SIE Lab (Room 118)

Dr. Ronda Taylor Bullock

*Co-founder and Director of "we are"
(Working to Extend Anti-Racist Education)*

Ronda Taylor Bullock is originally from Goldston, NC. In 2018, she earned her doctorate at UNC Chapel Hill in the Policy, Leadership, and School Improvement Program. Her research interests are critical race theory, whiteness studies, white children's racial identity construction, and anti-racism. Prior to entering her doctoral program, Ronda taught English for almost ten years at Hillside High School in Durham, NC, where she now resides.

Ronda is the co-founder and executive director of we are, which stands for working to extend anti-racist education. As a non-profit, we are works to equip children, parents, and educators with the knowledge and skills necessary to understand the complexity of racism. we are uses a three-pronged approach to dismantle systemic racism by offering summer camps for children in rising 1st-5th grade, workshops for parents, and professional development for educators.

Ronda is the wife of Dr. Daniel Kelvin Bullock and mother of son Zion and daughter Zaire.
